It was originally published as 'everyman's way of the cross' and has sold over 2 million copies. The photo's accompanying each meditation are black and white photo's of everyday life; an apartment building someone in a library, an old man sitting in a park. These down to earth pictures help bring the meditations hope to today and now.

1. People see your tacklebox in the bed of the pick-up and remove their hats and make the sign of the cross out of respect for the dead. 2. You see the fellows at the landing adding a few more pounds of pressure in the tires of the haul carts when you pull into the lot. 3. Omar the Tentmaker sews all your covers personally.
